Cut out the drawings along the blue line, then cut the paper only along the red line, leaving the last two drawings attached together.
Next, fold the first row of drawings along the black lines so that each page is separate.
When you reach the last one in the row, the back sides of the two connected drawings will overlap, and you can continue folding the second row of drawings. Awesome! Now you have something like an accordion fold.
You can glue the back sides of all the drawings together to give it a real book feel.
